

Robinson Huron Treaty Members' Transparency Circle

Our settlement is shared. Seeing how it is governed should be too.

In 2023 our twenty-one Robinson Huron Treaty First Nations reached a ten billion dollar settlement for unpaid annuities. It is the largest sum our communities have ever held. Across the treaty, members are asking the same honest question: how is our settlement governed, and what are we entitled to see?

This Circle is a way for members from different communities to come together and ask that question as one voice, with respect and with care. It begins with the women who reached out to start it, and it is open to every beneficiary who wants to take part.

What we would ask to see

TREATY-WIDE

The shared fund

From the Robinson Huron Treaty Litigation Fund: the disbursement agreement, the trustees and how they are chosen, the rules for changing the agreement, and the reporting members can expect.

IN EACH COMMUNITY

One common standard

A shared set of questions any member can put to their own council: who holds the funds, the trust's rules, what it can be invested in, who can authorize a withdrawal, and how it reconciles to the audited statements.

How we carry ourselves

- Member-led and independent. We are beneficiaries, not a council or fund body. Those are who we ask.
- Non-partisan. This is about transparency and information, not about removing or attacking anyone.
- Grounded in sourced facts, framed as questions. We do not make accusations or name private people.
- Respectful of every community's own governance and of every member's right to know.

This is our settlement and our future. Coming together to understand it is not a challenge to anyone. It is what a nation does.
